GERMAN SOLDIERS ARE COMMITTING ACTS OF VIOLENCE CONTRARY TO TERMS OF ARMISTICE.

ON HINDENBURG HEAD

Will Remain As Head of Supreme German Army Command—More Abdications Are Reported.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

LONDON, Nov. 14.—German soldiers are committing acts of violence against inhabitants and are destroying and pillaging contrary to the terms of the armistice, according to a French wireless message received today.

The message, which is from the allied high command to the German command, says that the allied command expects the German command to take measures to stop the violation. If the acts increase, it is said, the allied command will take steps to end them.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14.—THE NEW GERMAN GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN ORGANIZED WITH THE FOLLOWING CABINET MEMBERS: INTERIOR AND MILITARY AFFAIRS, FRIEDRICH EBERT; FOREIGN AFFAIRS, P. SKILDENNAN; DEMOBILIZATION, TRANSPORTATION, HEALTH AND JUSTICE, WILHELM DITTMANN; PUBLICITY, ART AND LITERATURE, HEARE TONANDSBURG; SOCIAL POLICY, RICHARD BARTLE.

More Abdications.

COPENHAGEN.—The abdication of Leopold IV, prince of Lippe, and Duke Edward of Anhalt, are reported to-day. The latter has resigned in favor of his son, who was born yesterday.

Will Retain Power.

Basel, Switzerland.—All imperial powers in Germany and Austria have voted in the state council, which will retain that power until a constituent assembly has definitely established a constitution, declares a resolution adopted by the state council at Vienna.

The resolution described German Austria as a democratic republic and an integral part of the German republic.

Will Confiscate Property.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—It's a pretty hard job to get to be a martyr these days. Mrs. Ruth Lightfoot, alleged pacifist and arrested on a sedition charge, tried to get into handcuffs and shackles "please," she pleaded to an officer. "I want to be a martyr."

"Sorry," he told her, "but I can't satisfy you. But I'll compromise, taking you to jail in a police wagon."

But then Mrs. Lightfoot learned that a police wagon is a covered vehicle, roomy, no one could view her from without, "so she balked. It ended by a very prosaic "cop" taking her to the bastile via a street car.

Danielson said, should make application to their commanding officers.

GREAT GROWTH FOR CITY PREDICTED AT MEETING LAST NIGHT

HOUSING PLAN THOROUGHLY DISCUSSED AT MEETING OF IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION HELD LAST EVENING.

TO FORM REALTY CO.

General Motors Company Will Invest $100,000 in Janesville According To Statement of Frank J. Green.

Janesville will have to be prepared to care for between 4,000 and 4,500 new citizens within the next twelve months according to a statement made by Frank J. Green, secretary of the first meeting of the Improvement Association held last evening.

The Improvement Association was the name suggested by W. C. Durant, president of the General Motors company in place of Housing Corporation. The name was readily adopted by the members of the organization.

Mr. Green in explaining the situation stated that he had been authorized by Mr. Durant to make the statement and that the statement was received with cheer by those present.

The meeting was started promptly at seven thirty and after a short introductory talk by President J. P. Cullen, Mr. Green stated the purpose of the meeting and then discussed the proposed method to be employed by the association.

Mr. Green explained the pyramid plan of building to be used in the city and Mr. Jeffris suggested that it be called the Janesville plan. The secretary gave each attendant a chart showing the connection of the Chamber of Commerce, the Housing Corporation, the Building and Loan Association and Housing committee. He explained in detail the tremendous amount of work that was required to house these people.

Mr. Green spoke of the work accomplished by the Chamber of Commerce, how the organization went ahead and completed the plans for the housing and had them ready to submit. Mr. Durant indicated that it was announced that the building would be completed. Mr. Durant made a card record of the plans and returned them to Mr. Green without a single correction. This is ample proof of the splendid work accomplished by the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Green started the audience when he stated that he had also been authorized by Mr. Durant to state to the members that the General Motors Company would give $100,000 without any idea of a cent of profit for the purpose of assisting in the housing. It will require about $300,000 to put the plan in working order and $100,000 of this will be subscribed by the General Motors Company.

It was explained how it was the desire to have the city built of modern homes and not huts or houses of the same type. This idea was quickly taken up and everyone present stated that they wanted a city of modern homes for the new workers who are coming to Janesville. In the next three years the General Motors company will bring to Janesville nearly 10,000 persons and the influx of these people will require a large amount of work. It was during the meeting that the people to arrive during the next few months could be taken care of in the city without any new homes being built.

Another surprise was sprung by Mr. Green when he stated that the original plan of the General Motors company was to erect one building in the city and that the plans now call for double that with the possibility of building a foundry which will be the largest in the state of Wisconsin.

Mr. Green gave a splendid explanation of the work and explained every detail in full. The report made by Mr. Green was adopted on the motion of Mr. Wartendyke.

M. G. Jeffris then addressed the meeting and told of what splendid things have been accomplished by the General Motors company in every way they have erected a factory. He stated that it was the greatest chance the city of Janesville ever had and he said emphatically that it was his opinion that the population of Janesville would be three times as great in 1921 as it is at the present time.

Mr. Jeffris told of the large payroll that would result when the factory was operating and stated that it would exceed the fondest dreams of the older residents in the city.

Other members spoke of the great opportunity offered this city and they were all of the same opinion that a new era was in sight for Janesville and that Janesville would easily treble its population within the next five years.

J. P. Cullen, president of the Chamber of Commerce spoke of the work of the new factory and stated that the work would be resumed within a short time.

The question of forming a Realty company was then taken up and discussed fully. It was decided to sell stock in the company and to carry on a campaign for the purpose of selling the stock.

It was then requested that all the members present who would buy stock in the company to kindly arise and to make the entire crowd stand and signified their willingness to purchase stock.

J. P. Cullen then appointed William McVicker chairman of the campaign committee and Roger Cunningham, W. H. Dougherty and A. J. Gibbons as members of the incorporating committee.

The meeting adjourned at nine o'clock with all of the members fully satisfied that Janesville was destined soon to be the leading city of Southern Wisconsin.

Turn to Princeton: Frank Birmingham, who has been in training for several months at a southern camp, has recently been sent to Princeton University, where he is a student in the school of military aeronautics.

THE GOVERNMENT and THE SPERRY & HUTCHINSON CO. are preaching from the same text

The government requests that everyone practice Thrift and Economy.

The government requests that retail selling be placed on a cash basis.

It is the plain, patriotic duty of everyone to comply with these requests.

Thrift is the natural sequence of cash trading.

Paying cash benefits you and the community in which you live.

Since 1896, the now nationally popular 2¢ Green Stamps given as a discount for cash, have induced millions to trade in this profitable, sensible, business-like way.

Today, these stamps are a symbol of Thrift in millions of homes, in thousands of cities and towns throughout the nation.

In encouraging this beneficial method of buying, 2¢ Green Stamps place within easy reach of everyone a most practical system for co-operating with the law of the land—Sensible Conservation and Practical Thrift.

The popular 2¢ Green Stamps and Thrift are synonymous. Twenty years ago these tokens blazed the trail followed today by millions.

THRIFT

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Heeding the voice of the people last night made me feel quite badly, it did not seem possible we had such a solid citizen in Janesville, as to want to deprive the children of their public playgrounds, or be so regardless of the children's health.

I guess I am safe to say that one out of Janesville lives in upper flats or apartments, where there are no yards and must seek pleasure somewhere else.

Very true, we want our children in parades and Sunday schools, but these children would never be able to stand if it were not for these exercises, and what wonderful feeling it gives a tired mother to know that the children can go to the playgrounds with a good supervisor to watch them.

We hope our school teachers and parents will have their clarities raised to compete with the high cost of Janesville's business men and women.

They have done wonderfully well in looking forward to the coming generation by providing the children with playgrounds; it seems to me one of the necessities of childhood life to become strong men and women.

A CITIZEN.

S. S. And as for calling children pest surely must be the party has pest of his own or has forgotten he was a little child once herself.

As To Sanatoriums

When one is seriously sick, they do not put off calling a doctor for another year.

Rock County, with three hundred and seventy-eight cases of tuberculosis is sick community. It loses an average of forty two people each year, mostly young mothers and fathers between 20 and 40 years of age. This is due to this preventable and curable disease. One person dies of tuberculosis in Rock County every eight and a half days and the death rate is increasing.

A tuberculosis sanatorium has been described as the most important part of the remedy. A committee all over the world agreed it is the most important factor in the control of tuberculosis. The physicians of Rock County, through action of the county medical society, have prescribed it for Rock County. Various committees of the county board appointed to investigate the matter, have, after studying the results where sanatoria are established unanimously recommended one.

The matter is now before the county board with definite plans and estimates as to costs. Every man on the board who has expressed himself has spoken in favor of a sanatorium, but there is some talk of further delaying the matter. Over two hundred people have died of tuberculosis in Rock County, while the matter has been under consideration for the last five years, and many new cases have been manufactured for the coming generation by failure to take care of advanced cases. We are glad the board is making plans for a sanatorium, and hope that it will not be further delayed.

JANESEVILLE PEOPLE GATHER IN CHURCH TO THANK FOR PEACE

CITIZENS OF JANESEVILLE GATHER IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH FOR THANKSGIVING MEET.

WILLMANN PRESIDES

Father Willmann Presided and Called Attention to Fact That We Are Lacking in Thanking God.

In a devout spirit of thanksgiving to God His master, and giving peace to the world, the people of Janesville gathered last evening at the Congregational church for a religious union service.

The chairman, Father Willmann, who presided at the meeting, called attention to the fact that in the wonderful celebration on Monday there seemed to be one note lacking, and that was the religious feeling, and it was to emphasize this, the right that the service had been, arranged that the beloved due to come in to the conflict, at just the right time. "The might arm of God, he believed, had been the shield on the side of justice, and divine providence and strength had been all about us in the hour of need."

Rev. F. E. Lewis, the speaker of the evening, gave a forceful and eloquent address in which he set forth some of the phases of the war and gave an outlook into the future, after the world's peace. He outlined three topics which he considered of prime importance at this time. First, what the war had been; second, what had been accomplished; and third, what it should be.

On the first topic he compared the present conflict with the crusades and the other religious wars of the past ages. He considered that it was the most religious war ever waged, because it grasped in most wonderful way, the great ideals of the cross, and carried them down through the work and life of the movement, until all were imbued with the spirit of sacrifice. "When the war broke out," he said, "Christian people were stunned and felt that the churches were to blame, some way, because civilization had fallen down. Then, later, when the ideals for which nations were fighting became more clear, the leaders of the church were blamed because America was not in the doing her part. But it was only during the last year and a half, since America went into the war, that the definite aims of the war were crystallized, and the movement became a religious crusade. From the stand point of the leaders of the church, he said, 'the world has much to be thankful for.' All of the generals, up and down the several fronts, were imbued with the idealism of the cross. Foch was a most reverent churchman, accompanied always by his chaplain, Sir Douglas Haig, most devout and God-fearing man. The appeal of Pershing to congress is well known, to send the best troops, the best and strongest men of the churches, that the morale of the men might be kept high. Lloyd George has been an example of piety, and of reverent devotion in God's service, and our own beloved President Woodrow Wilson has been a noble example of what the Christian gentleman should be."

The facts mentioned that during the hours of trouble, and perplexity, at the White House, when the president and his advisers had taken serious counsel on some of the perplexing problems of the time, the president had asked of them that they ask guidance and help from Almighty God, upon these questions.

"Our soldier men," he said, "were the best, the noblest, and the cleanest lot that ever marched under a flag. There are some of the things for which we have to be thankful in this hour of rejoicing for victory." Among those things which had been accomplished by the war he mentioned as chief that of appreciation for the peoples of Europe. "We have found," he said, "new ideals, new ways to appreciate, new ideals which all nations have had. Heroic little Belgium, which had been used for four years as a door-mat for Germany, was praised in no uncertain terms, and at the conclusion of his eulogy on its merits, a tiny Belgian flag was waved, with the words, "Long Live Belgium."

The same course was followed with Italy, which was described as a country of artists, of popular singers of heroic strain, of patriotic. This country, it was said, held back the hordes of Austria-Hungary, and kept them back from reinforcing Germany.

In speaking of Great Britain, the prediction of Beecher was recalled, when he said at one time to that government: "The time may come when our nation may join hands to help yours, in some great war for ideals." This time had come, but our own nation was not found lacking.

France, the wonderful people, were described as a country whose ideals of liberty, equality and fraternity had been the foundation of this country's conception of a democratic government.

Rumania, Monte Negro and Serbia also had a word of praise and appreciation from the speaker, who at the close unfurled an American flag and quoted from William Lloyd Garrison, when he said: "My country is the world, and my countrymen all the people of the earth."

In describing some of the changes coming out of the war, the speaker predicted a new feeling of church unity among the Christian people, and the breaking down of the doctrinal barriers of creeds. "The arch through which our armies would march would, he said, be a rainbow of promise to the oppressed people of the earth."

"The church at this time," he said, "had before the world new ideals, and must be faithful to the truth. In closing he voiced a plea that those who had died might not have given their lives in vain, and that the good ship of state might yet sail on."

The invocation was given by Rev. Raymond Riedel, and the benediction by Rev. J. A. McElree. The responsive readings were led by Father Willmann, and C. E. Bearman led in the singing of America, and other patriotic songs.

A half hour of concert music was given by the Bower City band, under the direction of Professor Thiel, as a fitting prelude to the evening's program. The following numbers were given: "March Exultant," introducing the red, white and blue; national hymns of the allies, with Marseilles for France; "God Save the King," England; "Royal Italian March" for Italy and Belgium; "Star Spangled Banner" for America.

OBLIVION

The German empire was a federation of twenty-six states and three cities which, prior to 1871, existed as separate and often antagonistic states. Most of them were Protestant, but some of the more powerful, including Prussia, Brandenburg, and Lower Saxony, Catholic. And this situation seemed to make a union of government impossible although they had the strong bond of a common language.

It was the genius—and ruthlessness—of Bismarck who came into power as minister to the king of Prussia in 1861 that made the great German empire.

The first step in effecting the organization of the German empire was the war by Prussia and Austria on Denmark for the possession of Schleswig-Holstein, in 1863. The grounds for the claim of the Germans, Duke Frederick V, father of the present emperor of Germany, on this narrow peninsula connecting Prussia with Denmark, are too detailed and too involved for consideration here.

Bismarck is reported to have said that there were only two people in Europe who understood the situation—himself and the emperor, and the other man was dead. But Bismarck played in a masterly fashion, led Denmark into a declaration of war on Prussia, in which Austria joined as head of the then German confederation. After a short campaign, Denmark was defeated. Austria now renounced that Schleswig-Holstein, which is the present empire of Germany; on this narrow peninsula connecting Prussia with Denmark, are too detailed and too involved for consideration here.

Disraeli is reported to have said that there were only two people in Europe who understood the situation—himself and the emperor, and the other man was dead. But Bismarck played in a masterly fashion, led Denmark into a declaration of war on Prussia, in which Austria joined as head of the then German confederation. After a short campaign, Denmark was defeated. Austria now renounced that Schleswig-Holstein, which is the present empire of Germany; on this narrow peninsula connecting Prussia with Denmark, are too detailed and too involved for consideration here.

This resulted therefrom a new confederation of German states called the North German Union with a parliament elected by the people. It was composed of all the German states except Bavaria, Wurtemburg, and Baden, and was united under a government something like that of the United States, with the king of Prussia president, and Bismarck as chancellor.

The growth of a strong federal state upon the eastern boundary of his empire was viewed with apprehension and jealousy by Napoleon III, then emperor of France. The condition in which the emperor's son had left France and the emperor's own ambitions made the country and Napoleon himself very easy prey for Bismarck's designs. The beautiful empress Eugenie, viewing with alarm the ascendancy of Protestant Prussia and the humiliation of Catholic Austria, both sides were looking for pretenses for war with one another.

Now again the details of the steps would take much space for the limits of this sketch. But the imperial historian must say that the French were as eager for war as were the Germans, and Napoleon III, resolved to celebrate the birthday of Napoleon I, the great Napoleon—the fifteenth of August—in Berlin.

France was maneuvered into declaring war on Germany. The French rushed to the border, intending to force the fighting into German territory, but they had reckoned without the national feelings which had developed among the German states. On either side these states became a nation.

In only eleven days an army of 450,000 soldiers was under the command of Von Moltke. In less than a month Anne Sedan and the capture of the French emperor. In seven months the French empire was swept away and the Germans won in France. In the same period France had to surrender Alsace and Lorraine, and pay an indemnity of 5,000,000 francs, or about $1,000,000.

The complete capitulation of France paved the way for an addition of Bavaria, Wurtemburg, and Baden to the rest of the German Confederation. On the eighteenth of January, 1871, in the Hall of Mirrors in the French palace of Versailles, King William of Prussia was crowned hereditary emperor of the German empire.

It was in this same palace of Versailles that only a few days ago the entire powers met to formulate the terms of the armistice to Germany.

The German empire immediately thereafter took commanding position in the affairs of Europe. Bismarck bent on repressing the activities of the socialists, put in effect a number of important and far-reaching social laws which had the people strongly on the swing. The old emperor, William I, died in 1888. His son, Frederick, came to the throne, but he was already a dying man. He reigned scarcely two months and when he died, William II, became emperor.

He took the reigns of the government early and soon cast Bismarck aside.

Up to the opening of the great war, Germany was enjoying unprecedented expansion and prosperity. Beginning with 1884, when Bismarck had established a protectorate over portions of southwest Africa, Germany had begun to accumulate a colonial dominion, but her ruling class was seized with grandiose ideas of its mission and the mission of the German people to attain world domination.

The army was built up to a tremendous power and aggressive weapon as the result of the propaganda of the Navy league. The German navy was developed into the second most powerful in the world, and the Junker group began to plan to challenge Great Britain's position on the seas. This group dreamed of a domination of continental Europe through a Germanized Mitteleuropa, and as steps entered successively into alliances with Austria and Italy, and into an understanding with Turkey which resulted in the construction of the Bagdad railway, through Mesopotamia with proposed terminus on the Persian gulf.

There was further attempted expansion in northern Africa. As a result of these various enterprises, Germany found herself against her Great Britain, France and Russia and the consequence was a precarious balance of power which divided Europe into two main camps. The assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne, in Sarajevo, gave German militarists the opportunity they were looking for of seeking a military decision.

Then came the war.

Now comes—Oblivion.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

After looking over all the pictures we had of Doris Kenyon, and maybe you'll be jealous, but there were at least twenty, we discovered the reason she has been called "Little Miss Happiness" by some of her fans. It is because she is all smiles all of the time or at least nineteen-twentieths of the time. For the accompanying photograph was the only one in twenty which did not show Doris's dazzling smile and perfect teeth, and that's why we used it just to show that she can look sweet and pensive and serious.

In telling how she "broke into" the land of celluloid Miss Kenyon is very direct. She always starts out by acknowledging you know, N. Y., as her home town and then she tells you about her father, the poet and author, James B. Kenyon. And if you were not careful she would skip to some other member of her family and forget to tell about herself.

If questioned often enough, however, she will finally consent to tell how she used to be a solist in a church choir with aspirations towards grand opera. Victor Herbert discovered her and offered her a part in "Princess Pat." She accepted and that was her first appearance—well, last but not the least. It was while playing in the chorus of this company that a motion picture producer offered her a part and again she accepted. This time she played as a co-star with George Beban.

World Pathé Famous Players, Essanay, and Wharton studios have all produced pictures starring Miss Kenyon and now she is making her own company. She claims that although this has always been one of her ambitions since she entered pictures she does not feel a bit important. Instead, she envies her director, Mr. Dietrich, now and she thinks that some day she will be a director herself. We don't wish Doris had bad luck, but we hope she never becomes a director, for what would we do without that smile of hers.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMSBY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a pimple. I have taken some medicine, thinking that they were caused by my husband. The pimples do not come so badly now as before, although there are several boils on my face. Can you suggest a blood purifier?

(3) What will remove the scars left by the pimples?

THANK YOU.

(1) To cure blackheads make an ointment of one ounce of soap liniment and one ounce of ether; mix with hot water, using a complexion or other soft brush. After wiping apply the mixture to each of the spots and let it remain on over night. Wash off in the morning with hot water. Continue until the spots have disappeared. Then twice a week rub the face with this mixture, removing the liquid at once by rinsing with clear water. If there are large pores wipe over each with a little alcohol.

(2) For pimples that frequently appear with blackheads make an ointment of two grams of betaphtol, twenty grams of sulphur precipitate and twenty grams of potash soap. Rub over the pimples night and day. This may be used at the same time as the blackheads mixture.

Spear mint tea is a drink which our grandmothers considered an excellent blood purifier. It is made by steeping two tablespoons of dried spearmint in three pints of water. It can be taken as a drink at any time during the day. You ought to be able to use it to prescribe a remedy because your blood seems to be in bad condition.

(3) For scars from pimples make a lotion of sixty grains of boric acid and eight ounces of witch hazel, and see if this has any effect. This lotion, with massage, should aid considerably in the passing of the scars.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am visiting one of my girl friends in a certain city and have been told you give such good advice. Please help me.

I have been corresponding with a soldier for some time and he has always answered my letters promptly until not long ago he wrote him a letter and said, "I am afraid you would think that he would write a letter the next day. I haven't heard from him since I got a card. Do you think I should answer the card? He didn't say I should answer it."

DOUBTFUL.

Yes. Answer the card. There may be a very good reason why you have not heard from the soldier and you should give him the benefit of the doubt.

Tired Mrs. Thompson: I am troubled a great deal with blackheads. Will you kindly tell me how to get rid of them and also how to prevent their coming again?

(2) I am also bothered with something about taking the children into the studio for a "trial talk"; something about $5 a day for the kiddie every time he worked.

It meant little to her. Only John, waiting outside with a frown on his face, muttered,

"I'll give you my answer tomorrow," he said firmly.

She joined her husband in the studio yard. Before they could say anything to each other, however, Mulry came up to them, dressed to go home.

"I'll give you a lift in my machine," he said hospitably.

"Where do you live?" Arcady chimed in.

"It's on the way home for

During the next half-hour, while they were speeding toward their home in Mulry's car Edith got a chance to marshal her forces for the struggle with the situation when she and her husband would be alone.

She succeeded, but only at such an expenditure of strength that when

"John, what brings you here?"

"I am negotiating for the moving picture rights of one of our books," he said coolly.

He was the studio manager, called but generally:

"Hello, do you folks know each other—why, by gosh, this isn't your family. Is it, Mr. Ferrol?"

"My wife and children," Ferrol said coldly.

"Wee-hi!" said Mulry heartily.

"Then that clinches it. I hire you."

Scalloped Rice With Cheese—Two cups steamed rice, two tablespoons cheese, few grains cayenne, milk, orange juice and cheese in alternate layers in buttered baking dish, add remaining ingredients, allowing sufficient milk to soften. Bake until crumbly.

Fruit Syrup—Save some of the juice of all fruit you can and add three-quarter cup corn syrup (white) to three cups fruit juice, boil it down to consistency of catsup and seal in glass jars. Use this fruit syrup on griddle cakes, rice puddings, bread puddings, taboula, sponge cake, with a little custard sauce and the syrup makes a nice dessert. Fruit butter, marmalades, jams, may be diluted with water heated and used in the same way.

SIDE TALKS—BY—RUTH CAMERONVIN TEAS

A friend of mine has recently bought the site of a summer house; between them one sees, from the road, a narrow strip of sunset river. In our nightly walk to the postoffice we have wide-flung views from hill-top and moor and bridge; and yet nowhere do we pause more often for a second look than where we see this little vista of sunset river and green moors between the ugly garage and the weather-beaten house.

She Liked the Vista Better

My friend is not ignorant of their state of mind. But she has no regrets. She took me to her lot last summer and showed me her main view—a section of the landscape framed between two tall birch trees. It is not quarter of what she could see from the hilltop, and yet I agree with her that, in its exquisite frame, her view has double the beauty and significance of the wider view. I have gone wrong and a sense of defeat was overwhelming me, how I caught a glimpse of a beautiful, smoky city sunset with two fretted church spires against it and a single budding lilac bush in the foreground, and how briefly, in the distance, I saw the strength of the eyes without suitable glasses, though possible for a time, is sure to weaken vision in the long run.

Even in the City.

Even in city streets sometimes yield exquisite vistas. I remember when I was in Boston I loved the vista one caught down the quaker little alleys, a scene away. Back to New York again, especially I remember, when everything went wrong and a sense of defeat was overwhelming me, how I caught a glimpse of a beautiful, smoky city sunset with two fretted church spires against it and a single budding lilac bush in the foreground, and how briefly, in the distance, I saw the strength of the eyes without suitable glasses, though possible for a time, is sure to weaken vision in the long run.

ANSWER—Madam, stop guessing and consider carefully the condition made by a real doctor. All of the meaningless phrases you apply to your health will not help you. Your doctor over there whose health is at fault needs a good tonic, but nothing answering the description has yet been invented. A good tonic is one which will not interfere with the action of the bowels. I have heard of something which has been searched for hundreds of years, but never found.

He obeyed. At the terse imperative command his brain had cleared. He had recognized Goetz in the soldier now galloping beside him. He glanced back over his shoulder. The Arabs were in sight. He caught the dash of steel and the waving of pennons above the dark line of dust. The air quivered with their horses' triumphant shouts. They were galloping. It was at that moment that the man riding before him swayed and suddenly fell back limp into his arms. Then Destin understood. One shot at least had told. Exerting all the powers of a brilliant horsemanship, he held on to the unconscious man and forced the straining mare to an increased effort. Side by side the two horses burst into the narrow passage between the rocks. Destin bent forward.

"We've no chance like this—warn Sidi-bel-Abbes—I shall try to take cover—God help you!"

Goetz nodded without answering and dashed on. At the end of the cuttingDestin drew rein and slipped to the ground. There he fell, face downward. The blood drummed in his ears. It filled his brain, thundering down every other sound. A dozen Arabs swept through the gully, but he neither heard nor saw them. When he at last lifted himself upon his elbow the pursuit had long since rolled away in the distance. The dawn had broken.

He glanced down at the man lying motionless beside him. His heavy brows contracted over eyes in which there had dawned a sudden emotion, a startled incredulity, changing a moment later to a bitterly contemplative amazement. He beat over the dark unconscious face. The fiery eyes that time after time had defied his with their brilliant recklessness were closed; the black brows smoothed out into an untroubled serenity. Yet the expression was as he remembered it.

In the far distance, beyond his range of vision, a sudden sharp rattle of rifle fire broke the silence. His eyes flamed with a faint triumph. Sidibeadoes had not been taken unaware. Perhaps that daredevil German had arrived in time.

He laid a shaking hand on the quiet breast. The man still breathed. It was like an answer—an acceptance. He opened the tunic with rapid skillful fingers. The roar of battle was now close at hand. It rolled toward the narrow barrier of rock in a cloud of rising dust, from which flashed an intermittent lightning. Colonel Destin paid no heed. He had traced the course of his bullet. It was lodged an inch above the heart, but its force had been spent. Destin bowed his head. A word of release had been spoken. He was free. The burden of years dropped from him. He was gazing down into the face of a child, in the frank clear eyes of a memory. He held the wounded man closer, shielding him with a stern tenderness.

"I too—thank God, Richard."

The cheering had grown louder. Within a hundred yards of the rocks where they meant to make their last rally the harried shot-ridden ranks of Redoubt Cavalry faltered. For an instant second of delay they seemed to be gathering to face the new attack; then the leaders broke away westward and with them, in a magnificent awe-inspiring semicircle, the whole beaten, panic-stricken host.

It was Goetz von Berlichingen who had led the victorious flank attack, sweeping the retreat far into the west. He had no orders to do so and only a small detachment of chasseurs at his command. But he had succeeded, and now he lay in the sand, coughing up blood from a bullet-riddled lung. General Meunier knelt beside him. He had no great interest in dying legions, but he wished to make sure of Colonel Destin's last whereabouts.

"You say to the right—among the rocks there?"

"Yes."

"Then your flanking movement probably saved them. You are a daring fellow; if you had lived I should have had the pleasure of court-martiauling you. As it is—have you any request to make?"

Goetz von Berlichingen lifted himself on his elbow. The haggard-faced man was shrunken with suffering.

"If I might speak to you—alone—my general?"

"By all means."

He had lifted the unconscious head upon one arm; his eyes passed for an instant to the tattered letter case and rested there. It had fallen open. Moved by he knew not what impulse he touched it tremblingly. A few dried and faded rose leaves, a letter, yellow with age, singed and pierced by his own bullet. Suddenly it grew very still about him. The crash of battle seemed to have sunk behind a deadening veil of silence. There was nothing left in the world but this man and himself.

"Richard Farquhar!"

The name escaped him without his knowledge. The legionary groaned and half turned, his unconscious hand clutching Destin's arm, and a minute later his eyes opened. They looked at each other steadily, and Destin shrank back. This was the expiation—the punishment. There was to be no curse and no mercy, but the grim working out of a logical merciless law.

"You know now, sir?"

The weak voice sounded loud in his ears—louder than the thunder of the guns. He made a movement of stunned ascent.

"Yes; you are Richard—Richard Farquhar, my—" He broke off. He was looking in the eyes of his judge; he awaited sentence.

Farquhar drew himself up with a desperate effort.

"They're—they're coming on fast—aren't they, sir? I haven't much time. And I have a message from my boss."

"I shall not trouble you again, Gabriele," he said gently. "Our ways lie in different worlds. I have not deserved much comfort of you. I spoiled my own life and I did my best to spoil yours. There is only one consolation that I can take with me—the knowledge that I failed."

"Yes—you failed." She sat by the rickety desk writing table, her chin resting on her hand, her eyes fixed absently on the half-finished letter before her. "You are not to worry about that, Stephen. Lives are not so easily ruined."

"I should like to think that you could forget me—that the shadow had passed away and left no trace. I should like to know you—happy."

"I am happy."

Still he waited, watching her with hungry wistful intentness.

"You will go back to England."

"Yes, I think so."

"Farquhar is worthy of you. You will begin a new life. If I could I would pray for your happiness together."

"I thank you, Stephen."

She heard the door close softly. He had gone. She felt as though with his passing the curtain had dropped upon the first great act of her life. And now a new act was to begin—lonelier one. He had taken with him his own dream of it; she knew that he would cling to her phantom happiness as to a last comfort, and she had no heart to tear it from him. All happiness is mirage. But to the dreamer the dream is reality. He would sleep in peace. She went on writing. It was very quiet in the little room. The drowsy hum of midday seemed to creep in through the half-open shutters on rays of sunshine which shifted slowly till they rested on the sheet of

Dinner Stories

A Frenchman was waiting at a railroad station in Ireland when a couple of natives sat down beside him.

Said one: "Sure, Pat, it's down to Kilmarnock. I've been, and I'm on my way back to Kilpatrick."

"I don't say 'so,'" said the other.

"Yes, of course."

Both were silent. She studied him wistfully. Without the ragged beard and in these clothes he seemed once more the man as she had known him in the London days—the reckless, headstrong soldier, without restraint, without fear. Only as she looked closer she saw the grave enabling lines which men gather on the road through suffering. Suddenly he lifted his eyes to hers. They puzzled almost frightened her in their dogmatic composure. "My father goes south tonight with the troops," he said. "He will suppress the risings and make treaties, and the work on his great road will be finished. That is his own wish. We have spoken together and I have understood, as I know you will. We have each to work out our own salvation in our own way. Out there in the desert he may find peace."

"And you?"

"My pardon and release were confirmed an hour ago. It was his own request, and they could not refuse. In a few weeks I shall go back to England. My father has given me the rough memoranda of his plans. I shall work them out in detail—if possible to perfection. They will be offered in due course to the government. I hope that even now I may serve my country."

"Look here," said the captain, "I want you what to do when you want to say anything; you should sing it." Then suddenly, in a tragic voice, the man commenced to sing:

"Should acid acquaintance be forgot and never brought to mind? The blooming cock's fell overboard, and is twenty miles behind."

Just Folks By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE LITTLE SOLDIER
They measured him and took his weight.
They wrote him down as much too small.
But little men have courage great
Which doctors can not guess at all.
His right to office they denied.
"Not big enough to lead," they said,
And home to us he came and cried,
Refusing to be comforted.

Three times they offered him a place
Where all in safety he might work.
Three times he said, with upturned face:
"I'll be a fighter, not a clerk."
The general strike had begun throughout.
At last the army took him in—
Buck private—and he had his chance.
And there was meaning in his grin
The day he sailed away for France.

"I'll show them some day, dad," said he.
"That all their measurements are wrong;
That it is what men cannot see
That makes a fellow weak or strong.
And ninety pounds of sterling grit
Are worth two hundred pounds of blub.
I'm small but I will never quit.
I'll show them that I've got the stuff!"

"He was too small to lead," they said,
Not large enough for shoulder straps;
And now the word comethat he's
A smile upon his face, perhaps;
For when his officers were killed
At St. Michael, that bitter day.
His missing captain's place he filled,
"Come on," he cried. "I'll lead the way!"

His chums are writing home to tell
How Jamie led the faltering line
Into the very jaws of hell,
And cheered them on with courage fine.
No bars upon his coat he wore;
He was too small under weight.
But now that he may fight no more,
His soul is ranked among the great.

Right after breakfast, King Avi-

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids on calomel. They take bold of the trouble and quickly correct.

Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. Sodomy liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr.
Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old homemade remedy has no equal. Ease-it and completely prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs than this. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant—children like it.

Pineox is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine ex-

To avoid disappointment, ask your full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded.

AUTO TIRE IN SECTIONS.

A worn portion may be removed and substituted by new one.

A new idea in automobile tire construction provides for the tires being built in four parts, one part overlapping the other, as shown in the accompanying illustration. The advantage of this is that an part being damaged or unduly worn, the remaining portions are destined to continue their life of usefulness. In other words, a damaged tire may be often repaired by the substitution of a part instead of requiring entire renewal.

J.M. BOSTWICK & SONS.*ENTERTAIN COUNTY BOARD AT SCHOOL

Pursuant to an established custom, the members of the County Board of Supervisors were entertained at a dinner and program on yesterday by the faculty and pupils of the Rock County Training School. About fifty members of the board accepted the invitation and enjoyed the bountiful dinner served to them, at noon, by the young ladies composing the domestic science class at the training school.

The opening address on "The Value of an Education," was given as later event in the afternoon's program. The speech was entirely impromptu and was given by Mrs. Marshall Richardson, in substitution for a speaker who was unable to be present.

"Education," said Mrs. Richardson, "was the foundation of efficiency, and the schools were the cradles of democracy and Christianity."

He emphasized the thought that we were living in a great time, as no such day, with its unlimited possibilities, has dawned before for the world.

He dwelt on the debt that the nation owed to France for its help in Revolutionary War, and said that the events of the last few months had helped to pay back this debt to France.

"We must look to the rising generation to see that this debt is paid in full," he said.

The great future which lies before the young people of this generation was the chief upon, and the big responsibilities which go with these great privileges, was forcibly described. "Nothing in life was a greater heritage," he said, "than a good education." He thought that the schools of our land must be improved, practical education along industrial lines be given to the pupils, and they must be taught how to be efficient in useful work.

"One blessing of the war, was that people had been required by the government to engage in useful occupation."

"Money could not buy exemption, but it was necessary for everyone to do their part in service."

He said this policy of the government might continue, and that useful occupation by everyone might be the rule after the war. The value of the work in the last analysis depended upon the mental powers, and this people could be educated to a higher plane of efficiency. "The high ideals of our soldiers had come," he thought, "if, in their educations in their homes and later in the cantonments."

The big problems involved in the rehabilitation of Europe were also touched upon, and the hope and belief was expressed that in this great crisis, American might be found equal to its task.

A delightful violin number, a "Viennese Popular Song," was played by Miss Florence Crissey, with Miss Lois Thorne as accompanist. She also responded to an encore with a minute by Beethoven.

Miss Delilah Fender also gave a couple of violin selections, "Les Mélodies des Nuits," and a Slumber Song.

The Model school of about twenty tiny tots marched in and gave a group of songs, closing with the oaths of allegiance to the flag, and a flag song which was effectively rendered.

C. E. Bearmore also led in the singing of several patriotic songs, which were much enjoyed by the audience, the white clapping at about two o'clock when the board returned to their duties at the Court House. Much credit is due to Supt. Lowth and his corps of assistants who arrange these annual events, which serve to keep the board of the county in touch with the affairs at the school, and also enabled them to become better acquainted with each other, by meeting together in a social way.

OBITUARY

Winifred Showalter Ward has been received . . . of the death of Miss Winifred Showalter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Showalter. During the years in which her father was superintendent of the Wisconsin State School for the Blind, Miss Showalter made many visits in Janesville and throughout the state.

She was a bright, happy manner and friendly interest in those about her made lasting friendships.

After attending the University of Wisconsin for some time, she moved west, since then having lived in Nebraska, California, Idaho, Montana and Minnesota. While very versatile and efficient her work was quickly recognized. A lover of music, western life and scenery, and human nature her travels brought her a fund of information and incidents with which she enriched her delightful letters.

The following notice was taken from The Courier News, Fargo, N. D.: "Miss Winifred Ruth Showalter, 21 years old, of Minneapolis, died Thursday morning at the home of her brother, H. P. Showalter, 43 Burnell flats, Fargo, following a brief illness from influenza."

She is survived by her parents, living in Minneapolis, and two brothers, R. P. Showalter, Fargo, and R. D. Showalter, Grand Island, Neb.

Miss Showalter came to Fargo a short time ago to assist in nursing her brother and his wife who were ill from influenza, and while engaged in this work, she contracted the disease.

Eastern Star services will be held at the Monroe chapel at two o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment will be in Riverside cemetery.

World's Tallest Chimney.

In many cities in various lands are chimneys which have been proclaimed as "the tallest in the world," but the structure which without doubt truly possesses this title has recently been completed in Saganoseki, Japan.

It is re-enforced concrete and it stands 570 feet high on a hill 430 feet higher than the copper smelter with which it is connected, so that it discharges its poisonous fumes 1,000 feet above the plant. The chimney is 42 feet in diameter at the base and its inside diameter at the top is 26 $\frac{1}{4}$  feet.

The foundation is 95 feet in diameter and contains 2,700 cubic yards of concrete. The first 150 feet of the chimney has a concrete lining separated from the outer wall by a five-inch space. Four hundred tons of steel were used in the whole construction.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Mad Supply in Reserve.

Mother had just finished washing her hair, when our neighbor entered. "My," she exclaimed, "you have beautiful hair!" Charlie, who was standing near, broke out saying: "Well, that's not all; she has more in on the dresser."—Chicago Tribune.

Tattoo Marks.

It is possible to get rid of tattoo marks by having the ink dissolved out with acid but this destroys the skin and leaves a scar. It is also possible to have the tattooed skin cut away and replaced with grafts from some other portion of the body.

WASP MAKES USE OF TOOLS

Insect of the Spheci Family That Tamps Its Nest Shut With a Stone Hammer.

So far as known, only one small insect—wasp of the Spheci family—among the millions of creatures belonging to a lower order than man, has ever employed the aid of a tool to accomplish a desired result. The mother-wasp of this family digs a tunnel in the ground, deposits her egg in it and provides a caterpillar stung to death or to a condition of paralysis for her baby to feed on when hatched. The grub subsists upon this caterpillar until it passes through the pupa stage into the perfect-winged insect. Then it digs its way out of the tunnel and begins its life above ground as a wasp.

But after the mother-wasp has made its tunnel and deposited the egg, it finishes its task by ramming down pellets of earth, little stones, etc., into the mouth of the tunnel. This is the rare habit of these wasps. It is recorded on undoubted authority, that one inventive mother, when the mouth of the tunnel was covered to a level with the rest of the ground about it, brought a quantity of fine grains of dirt to the spot, and picked up a small pebble in her mandibles, used it as a hammer in pounding them down with rapid strokes, thus making the spot as firm and as hard as the surrounding surface. Then she departed, brought more dirt, picked up the pebble again and used it as a hammer, as before.

The English thrush brings its snails to a certain convenient stone on which it will crack their shells by beating them upon it. Some sea-birds carry shell-fish to a height and drop them on the rock to break their shells; but this brings only the anvil into use, not the hammer. The case of the wasp is the only one which records the seemingly intelligent use of a tool to accomplish a given purpose.—People's Home Journal.

Sense of Relief.

"How did the shortage of gasoline affect you?" "Well," replied Mr. Chuggins, "it was a kind of comfort to know offhand exactly why the old machine wouldn't run."

New Use for Carbolic Acid.

Carbolic acid gas is used in a machine of European invention to spray mortar or plaster on a wall and hasten its setting.

Wine colored velvet with gray piping forms this dressy yet serviceable gown. The velvet conserves wool, and the designer conserves velvet by using a broad bias band to simulate an overskirt. Many bone buttons form an effective trimming.

QUAINT OLD INDIAN COINS

So Adulterated That They Were Not Even Accepted In England as Value in Metal.

In 1908 the independent state of Hyderabad, India, obtained a modern mint and called in the coins that had been current up till that time. The old mint of Hyderabad was little more than a coppersmith's shop in which scrap copper of all sorts was melted up, hammered into plates, cut up into very rough approximations of one tola in weight, and stamped between dies, one of which was in the anvil and the other in a toll held in tongs. A blow from a sledge hammer made the impression. There was no regularity in shape, weight or stamping, nor was the metal uniform in quality.

The mint could not furnish supplies fast enough, and licenses were issued to coppersmiths to assist in production. Naturally, the Scientific American states, nonlicensed persons began to manufacture, and adulteration with lead was so flagrant that when several tons of these coins were sent to England as old metal they were returned on account of their impurity and were finally worked up into brass for local consumption. A "dub," if held in the flame of a spirit lamp, would before it reached red heat begin to discharge very fine jets resembling mercury; the lead, having reached its fusing point, burst from the copper with a force indicating a very high internal pressure.

CHARLES L. FILFIELD,

DOUBLE-BARRELED WORLD'S SERIES IS PROPOSED FOR 1919

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS)
New York, Nov. 14.—Clarence Mitchell, the Brooklyn southpaw, now in France, believes there will be a double world's series next fall.

He thinks that it doesn't out that the war will be a thing of the past in plenty of time for the major leagues to play their schedules and stage the big, blue ribbon event, as usual.

Meanwhile, he opines, the soldiers and sailors in the service of Uncle Sam will battle it out on foreign diamonds to decide who's who in the armadas.

When the soldier and sailor nines finish their campaign the team that wins the championship will clamor for a chance at the winners of the 1919 world's series and public sentiment will demand that they be given a chance to battle for the title.

The soldiers are the best of the country's best ball players in the service now and some of the army and navy teams which will be in action on foreign soil next summer will be practically all big league caliber, for the enlisted and drafted men will not be mustered out of service in time for the players now in uniform to return to the major leagues for the coming season.

A two-ply world's series with a military and naval flavor to one-half of it will be a hit, and from present indications the fans are in for a treat they never dreamed of.

MAY TRANSFER BIG FOOTBALL GAME TO OMAHA

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 14.—The proposed transfer of the Northwestern North Western football game, slated for November 22, from Lincoln to Omaha, where it was offered to the Red Cross authorities, provided that organization would assume the $4,000 guarantee to Northwestern and transportation expenses of the Nebraska team, has been abandoned because of the refusal of the Red Cross to deal with the Northwestern management on any financial basis other than a guarantee of traveling expenses.

Following this action of the Red Cross, Prof. R. D. Scott, director of athletics at Nebraska, wrote the Northwestern authorities suggesting that the $4,000 guarantee for game in Lincoln cut at least in half. According to Prof. Scott, the game may be called off if the Evanston school does not agree to those terms, as the war department has now practically taken hold of the game and has put a ban on expensive trips and big financial rewards.

MORRIS MILLER

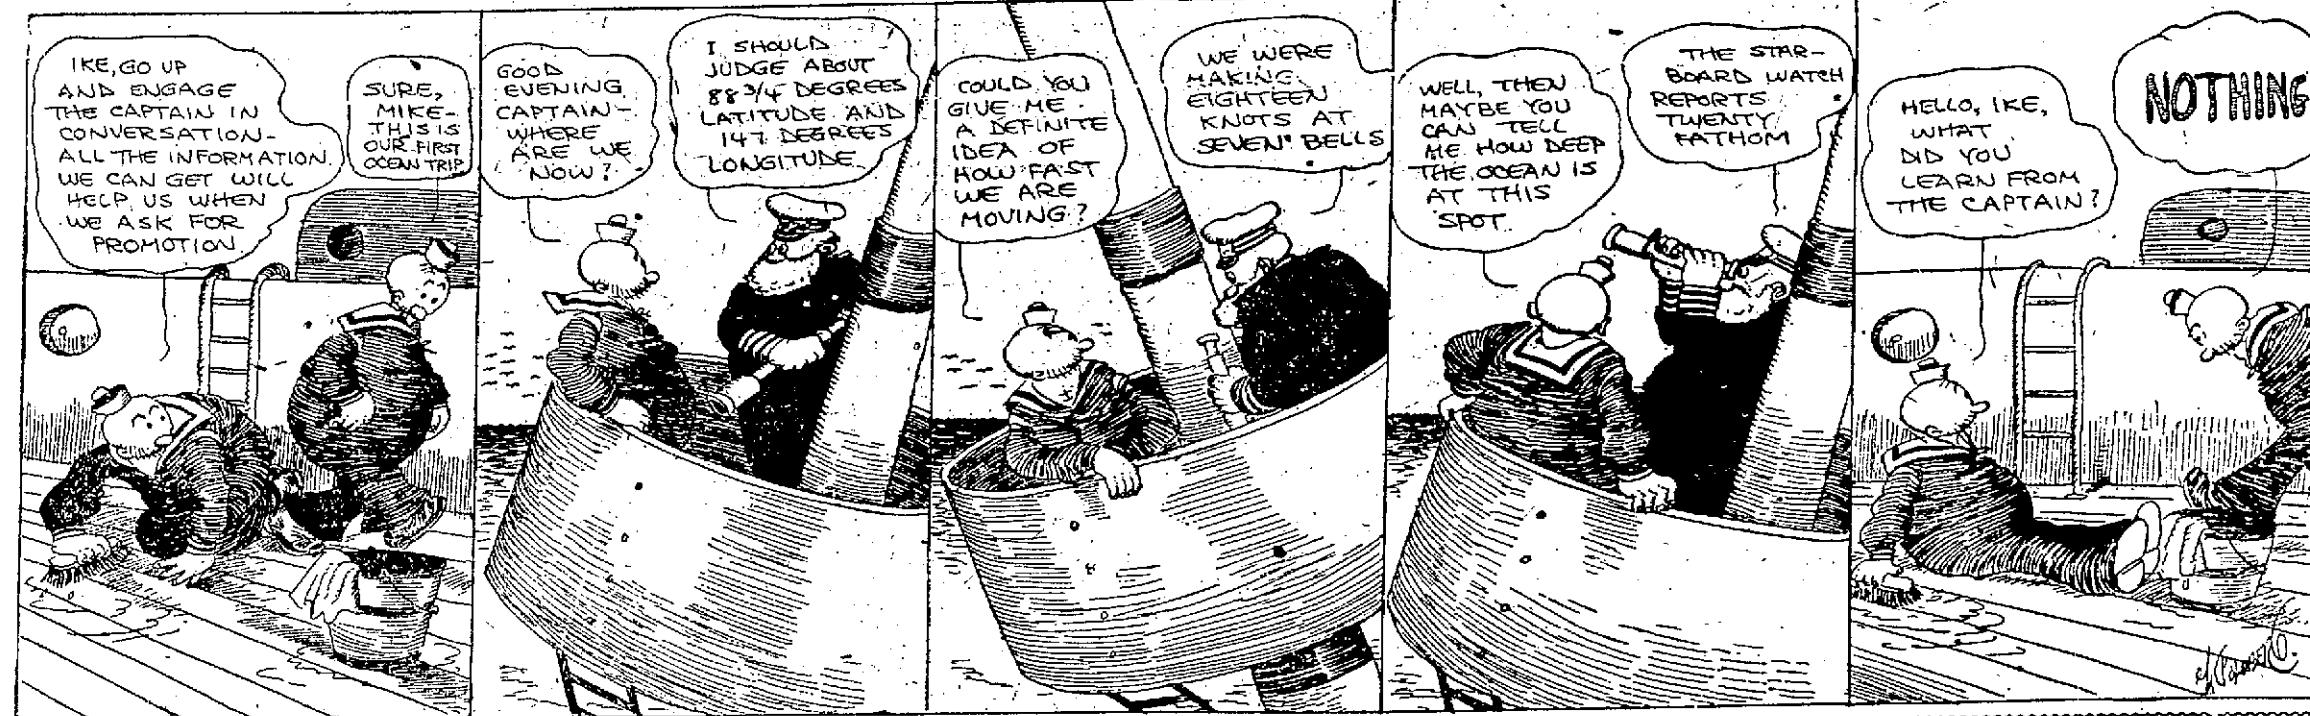

Lee Axworthy, 1:58 1/4, the most valuable light harness horse in the world and holder of the record for trotting shuttles was found dead by his groom at Castleton Farm near Lexington the other morning when the groom carried feed to the stable.

The horse apparently had been in the best of health, nothing suggesting a disease of any kind having been noticed by those in charge of him. When put away for the night Lee Axworthy seemed as fit as at any time in his life.

Fifty thousand dollars had been raised for him.

The horse had been given the care of a prince at Castleton. H. K.

MIKE AND IKE—THEY LOOK ALIKE.

Devereux of Cleveland, one of his said Larry, "that I was the greenest busker ever broke into the major leagues. I thought McGraw, Dahmen and McGann were regular man-eaters, and I was almost afraid to open my mouth on the field." Also, when more easily fiddled than most buskers, I remember a fine stringing Lou Ritter, who was then catching for Brooklyn, gave me. Shortly after I joined the Giants we went over to Brooklyn for a series and opened it with a double-headed. Between games Ritter came over and began to talk to me.

"Where did you come from kid?" he asked. I told him Springfield. "What did you hit?" was his next question. When I told him, he said: "Well, I don't wonder you stand up there well. What do you like to hit?" he went on. I told him that, too, and after that, I told him to what field I generally hit. Before he got through with me he sure had me down on the ground, and I didn't know what to call for when I went to bat and every player on the Brooklyn club knew where to play for me. I was as respectful to him as I could possibly be, and it wasn't for a long while that I tumbled to the fact that he had been kidding me and worming everything he wanted to know right out of me."

As a two-year-old, Lee Axworthy trotted to a record of 2:28 1/4. As a three-year-old he was overshadowed by Peter Volo, but trotted to a mark of 2:03 at Lexington. His career a four-year-old was cut short by lameness but not until he had won the $10,000 M. & M. at Detroit and therein defeated Peter Scott in the only race that great trotter lost in 1915. Before retirement he returned to defeat Peter Volo in a great match race at North Randall and retired for the year as a four-year-old with a record of 2:03 1/4.

In 1916 Lee Axworthy came into his own. At North Randall, he dethroned The Harvester as the standard trotting champion by negotiating the victory in 2:00 1/4. At Syracuse he cut that mark to 2:00. Later, at Lexington, he further cut his record, stepping in 1:58 1/4. That mile was the second fastest ever trotted. That record breaking mile finished Lee's public career.

Larry Doyle admits he was awful green when he broke into the big show with the Giants. "I believe,"

PRINCE WORKS IN STREET AS LABORER

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS)
New York, Nov. 14.—Intimate news of the condition to which former members of the Russian court have been reduced is conveyed in information received from Hugo Blackman, a Finnish painter. Blackman, who spent many years in Petrograd where he was a court favorite, has now returned to Helsinki. A letter from him received here says:

"One of my closest friends saw a man working on the streets. Just think then how advanced I was to find that the worker was my good friend Prince Putjatin, the husband of Maria Pavlovna, the former wife of Prince Wilhelm of Sweden, who hastoured the United States."

"Putjatin is a member of Russia's former highest and richest aristocracy."

"Maria Pavlovna, former Princess of Sweden, now living with her husband in a paupid quarters without a single servant, has stood in line to get her rations."

"And when the prince was asked on the street:

"What are you, your excellency, doing here?" he looked up sadly and said:

"I'm making my daily living."

And He Was Annoyed!

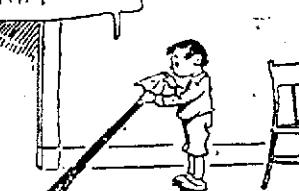

The Proprietor—"What made that customer walk out without buying anything? You didn't offend him, I suppose?" Shopman—"I don't think I did, sir. He asked me to show him a hat to suit his head and I showed him some of our soft felts."—Pearson's Weekly.
